Paper 1 – Reading Comprehension and Usage
Date: 22 January 2025
Time: 8:30am – 9:30 am

CORE SECTION
Part A Reading Comprehension
Part B Grammar usage

1. Tenses

- Simple Present
- Present Continuous
- Simple Past
- Simple Future
- Past Continuous
- Present Perfect

Infinitive	Present participle	Simple past	Past participle be	being	was/were	been
choose	choosing	chose	chosen
drive	driving	drove	driven
eat	eating	ate	eaten
get	getting	got	got/gotten
have/has	having	had	had
listen	listening	listened	listened
lose	losing	lost	lost
make	making	made	made
practise	practising	practised	practised
quit	quitting	quit	quit
run	running	ran	run
see	seeing	saw	seen
spend	spending	spent	spent
set	setting	set	set

2. Type 1 and 2 conditionals

Type 1 Conditional

We use conditional sentences to talk about possible situations.

In conditional sentences about possible situations, we use the simple present tense in the if-clause and the simple future tense in the main clause.

If – clause (simple present tense)	Main – clause (simple future tense)
If it rains,	we will cancel the outing.

We can change the order of the two clauses in conditional sentences. When the main clause comes first, we do not need a comma between the clauses.

Main – clause (simple future tense)	If – clause (simple present tense)
We will cancel the outing	if it rains.

Type 2 Conditional

We use conditional sentences to talk about unreal or imaginary situations.

In conditional sentences about unreal or imaginary situations, we use the simple past tense in the if-clause and the would + base form in the main clause.

If – clause (simple past tense)	Main – clause (would + base form of the verb)
If I were you,	I would talk to your parents.
If it was the end of the world tomorrow,	I would spend all my money today.

We can change the order of the two clauses in conditional sentences. When the main clause comes first, we do not need a comma between the clauses.

Main – clause (would + base form of the verb)	If – clause (simple past tense)
I would talk to your parents	if I were you.

Connectives of reason: as, because and since

- We use the connectives of reason as, because and since to express the reason for something. They introduce a clause of reason.
- We can put them at the beginning or in the middle of a sentence. When we put them at the beginning, we use a comma to separate the two clauses.

Connective	Clause of reason	Main clause
As/Because/Since	I forgot to mute the mic,	my teacher and classmates heard everything!

Main clause	Connective	Clause of reason
Frank was excited	as/because/since	he got lots of likes and comments on his most recent post.

3. Connectives of reason (as, because and since) and result (so, therefore, as a result)

Connectives of result: so, therefore and as a result

- We use the connectives of result so, therefore and as a result to express the result of something.
- We use so in the middle of a sentence to introduce a new clause. We often put therefore and as a result at the beginning of the next sentence. We need a comma after them.

  I couldn't figure out how to turn it off, so I had a unicorn horn on my head for the whole meeting!

  The podcast was very interesting. Therefore, we listened to every episode.

  Last week, I spent a lot of time online. As a result, I wasn't spending enough time on healthy activities.

Part A - Reading a short text

Welcome to Oceanside—the most spectacular shopping centre in Hong Kong! With over 100 shops to choose from, Oceanside has something for everyone. Visit boutiques featuring the most fashionable pieces, the city's biggest sports shop and the first AR furniture shop. If you're into unique finds, you won't want to miss our weekend pop-up market.
Feeling hungry? Grab a quick bite at a cafe or the food court. For a more comfortable setting, visit one of our many world-class restaurants. When you're done shopping, watch a film at Wave Cinema or visit our indoor ice rink. The fun never ends!

Since beginning my fitness journey, my health has improved a lot. However, I also noticed that exercise can be, well, quite boring! That's a big problem because if you hate exercising, you stop doing it. And if you stop doing it, it affects your health. Have you ever considered combining entertainment with exercise? Let's call it 'exertainment'!

Getting into shape doesn't mean you have to be isolated. Find a group of friends and set weekly challenges to help keep you on track. You can even chip in to buy prizes for the winners. And, there's nothing wrong with a bit of competitive spirit!

Social media is a great tool. It allows me to stay in touch with friends. I can also share photos and videos with people all over the world. Besides, it's a great source of information. Just yesterday, I was using hashtags to find interesting articles about various subjects.
Now let's talk about the dark side of social media. It's very addictive! Last week, I spent a lot of time online. As a result, I wasn't spending enough time on healthy activities. Even worse, while I was looking at Instagram, I was comparing myself to other people. That made me so depressed.

Sleep and physical health are closely related. Sleep increases your energy levels, so you feel more energized during the day. If you exercise, your body releases chemicals that help you sleep.
Let's look at three ways to improve sleep quality. Firstly, listen to calming music. Secondly, stop using electronic devices one hour before bedtime. The light from screens can be extremely disturbing to your sleep. Finally, monitor your sleep with a sleep tracker like a smartwatch. It detects how many times you've woken up and how many hours of sleep you've had.
